Can't Get Maine Apples

Fruit from this State is Missing in the Boston Retail Stores

By D. Cromett Clark of Somerville, Mass.

On Saturday last, I bought some Arkansas Black apples, grown in Oklahoma, for eating and cooking at home. That variety is gaining rapidly each year as a retail favorite in the stores of Boston and suburbs in March and April, and even into May. It is sold here in two sizes, one about 2 1/2 inches long by 2 3/4 inches across and the other smaller. It comes in a very deep red, the skin is smooth, the texture is firm, somewhat like that of a Northern Spy apple, it cooks nicely, and the flavor is mild and pleasant, about that of the Monmouth apples grown in Maine. The blossom end is narrow and only very slightly indented.

Most of the apples seen in Boston at present are the Stayman or Winesap, two varieties not easily told apart. I saw a few light yellow russets today, a russet different from what I knew as a russet in the past, and very agreeable eating, but not cooking, and also today I discovered a few McIntosh apples. The Stayman and Winesap, mostly from Oregon and West Virginia, lead the local market now, as I am told, with the Arkansas Black being to be leading in a few weeks, and the others occasionally found. The McIntosh, a Western apple, is here in small quantities.

I inquired for Maine apples, and the Boston fruit men tell me that they cannot get them. This statement generally applies to wholesalers as well as retailers, and it is certainly correct for the retail.

Maine, a natural apple-raising region, is losing out in marketing its apples in Boston, the nearest big market. I think that it is safe to say that from October to April, the greater Boston market consumes more than a million apples a day, which at a count of 125 apples per box, seven months (214 days) equals one million, seven hundred and twelve thousand boxes of apples in the season.

That is a worth-while market and it is the most of its apples west of the Mississippi River, though thousands of boxes come from down south.

The particular thing that I wish to suggest this time is not a repetition of the statement that Maine apples could be sold in Boston all right if offered in large enough lots—ten thousand bushels to one hundred thousand bushels—but that the old Black Oxford apple, also called Black apple—could be made a good seller in the closing weeks of the season, from about March 21 until some time in May. When I was a boy in Brookfield, forty to fifty years ago the Black apple was a favorite for home use in the latter part of the season. Nobody had cold storage, but most farmers had good eating apples in the cellar until some time in June, for the Black apples were slow to ripen off in storage and were not desirable for eating until most other apples were gone.

The Black apple is small, but here and there a tree was found which yielded nearly as large as many Baldwins and somewhat larger than the average Fameuse (or Snow) apples. Those larger Black apples must have come from trees having superior soil conditions. With modern fertilizing and care of the trees, might not the fruit usually be larger? The Black apple is a beautiful bearer, which is another reason why it ought to be a profitable orchard fruit.

The situation is that here in Greater Boston, we are hungry for apples and cannot get them from such a good and such a near-at-hand producing region as Maine. And such a desirable late spring cooking apple as the Black apple, we cannot get at all.

Does it look like an opportunity?

HONORED FARM AND HOME WEEK

Among the six outstanding farmers honored at the Farm and Home Week at the University of Maine this week was Leslie E. McIntire. The account says, "It takes a heap of work in a lifetime to make life worth living." At the present time he, in partnership with his son, Clayton, own 60 head of registered Holstein cattle said to be the first to be accredited in Maine. His farm annually produces approximately 60 acres of hay, two acres of potatoes, 12-15 of sweet corn and 10 of barley.

Shrubbery and shade trees are found around his buildings. His buildings are equipped with running water, electric lights and power from two home plants. The home is attractive and comfortable. It has furnace heat, bathroom, telephone, washing machine and radio. The following indicates his activity in public affairs: Selection for many years; President of the County Agricultural Society; officer in the Council Meeting of his church; Master Pomona Grange; Member Executive Committee State Grange, eight years; Director N. E. M. P. A. and Holstein Friesian Association; County Farm Bureau Project leader for 10 years (also many other positions)."

The important reason FATS and oils are not digested like starches or proteins, they must first be emulsified in the body before they can be utilized as nourishment.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is pure cod-liver oil scientifically emulsified—prepared for easy and rapid digestion, just as Nature provides emulsified fat in milk.

This is the important reason why the cod-liver oil you take—should be emulsified—should be Scott's Emulsion.

Average automobile receipts for highway improvement have increased steadily.

ly from year to year, the booklet shows, despite or perhaps because of the growing number of automobiles. In 1919, with a registration of 7,566,446 vehicles, the average receipts per car were $3.68, while ten years later, with a registration in excess of twenty-four million automotive vehicles, the average income per car was $25.63.

A chapter on Federal Aid operations, falls second in the booklet, while separate chapters are allotted to the state highway systems, and to county and local activities.

World highway mileages afford a vivid comparison of the growth of automotive transportation in the United States, statistics for 137 nations and autonomous countries being presented.

A chapter on highway uses offers an interesting study, while another on uniform warning and direction signs, portrayed in colors, gives the signs recommended for use by the American Association of State Highway Officials.

Chapters on highway films available, on bibliography, and finally on organizations interested in highway development complete the study, with an explanatory note outlining briefly the activities of the Highway Education Board.

Birch Wood Manufacturing

Maine has been called the "Pine Tree State" but the amount of small articles manufactured from the several types of birch cut within the state borders is interesting.

These very small articles, manufactured by many wood working plants include Bobbins, Camera Film Rolls, Checkers, Clothespins, Cork Caps, Cork Tops, Dowels, Pail Handles, Parcel Handles, Tool Handles, Wash Boiler Handles, Peg Wood, Shoe Heels, Shoe Pegs, Skewers, Spools and Toothpicks.

A cord of sound birch will yield about 9,000,000 tooth-picks.

The plan of saving a small amount regularly will prove to you the value of making a habit of looking after the small amounts of cash.

Frank Warren's garage, as Lionel was seeking parts to his Chalmers car. Reaching there we learned that Mr. Warren had gone up to his sister's place about two miles farther north. It was beginning to get dusk as we left there (just a moment, please, while I say that just the day previous, Mr. Patterson was telling us he was going to trade his car in for a new machine as he wanted a little more power).

Now I will say that out in Rhode Island a hill the length of the one between Linn Farrar's and Mrs. Varney's would be called a whole of a hill. Now listen, when we landed in the Hammond door-yard, we met several people who were spending the evening there, and during our conversation, Mr. Warren, a dealer, mind you, says, "You have got some car there?" "Why so?" "I, and his car, was out of twenty that comes here to the door, the remainder are left at the foot of the hill. Well, you should have seen Mr. Patterson at that particular moment, and the value of the power his car had increased in his mind to such an extent that upon our way home, he said, "I guess I will run her the third season."

The Varneys have been getting out some pine lumber from their Stetson lot, while Olph Varney made three loads of it with the big Reo, hauling upwards of twelve hundred feet mill scale to West.

Summer each of three loads. As to your correspondent's opinion, if there is anyone in Summer that is improving the cold weather, we have been having the past two weeks it is Edgar Barret, for he is certainly moving his birch tree, for he is making four trips at a rapid from his place to the Tebbets mill. Let us mention the quality of the goods, too, as there is hardly any red heart at all in it.

Note inquiry in North Paris items as to the womanman vacating Mr. Allen's camp and was later seen traveling north drawing a loaded handcart. Possible it could have been the tourist spoken of in this paper recently. Thought of course we do not know. But Olph says if he is, he hopes he don't return till warm weather.

In last week's issue your correspondent saw where Mr. and Mrs. Percy Grover of Bolsters Mills went ice fishing one day recently. Why not tell us what luck, Percy?

Your correspondent was deeply interested in the story. The Silver Ball by Dr. Charles A. Stephens in last week's issue. The evening of last week was busily taken up by a party of friends, who called upon Mr. and Mrs. Olph Varney. Those present were Arthur Childs, Walter Bonney and Omar Farrar. All enjoyed a pleasant evening at cards.

Omar Farrar has finished work for James Gammon and is at this time stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Olph Varney. The heaviest wind for the winter has been blowing steady for the past seven days and nights, with the thermometer keeping near zero every night, and the meadow brook where cattle are watered near the bridge, froze over in running water, Friday night to the depth of two inches, and with the exception of two nights previous to this, this winter has it froze to this depth before, and all land for as far as the south side of long mountain, is covered with snow. Looks like six weeks sliding this March.

The Tebbets Company's birch mill, they came here to the Thompson place to begin their first season saving in the mill upon April 6, 1927, with Silas Keniston as foreman, they began sawing April 11.

NORWAY

This Spring, as in the past

people who want to be thrifty and dress smartly too, find a perfect solution to that problem in this great Maine store.

Why so many come from all over Northern New England to shop here!

When we made a substantial addition to our store two years ago, we did it in preference to opening branch stores because we can concentrate in one store better stocks—larger assortments and varieties than would be possible in any number of branches.

Complete stocks may sound like old fashioned advertising. But we are old fashioned enough to believe that large assortments combined with all that's smart and new in style—and best in value—make the ideal shopping conditions that exist in this store.

We are not content to show what nine out of ten women want. We are here to serve the tenth woman, too. And we are never further away than your telephone or post office whenever you find it inconvenient to run down to Portland yourself.

SUITS COATS

the backbone of a smart Spring wardrobe not for a long time have coats been so individual

Suits come into their own this season. They are the outstanding fashion. There is nothing smarter or more practical you can wear. Each new house gives it a new, fresh look. Style sketched with dainty pleated skirt $25. Other suits $25 to $95.

Capes in infinite variety—and flattering lines appear. But not only that—many are subtly flared; some are belted; some wrap charmingly. We've sketched a cape in navy blue at $59.50. Other coats $25 to $150.

Even a little inexpensive dress has style and charm that stamps it as an unusual value at its price

Because we have an entire department specializing in them, we can offer you inexpensive dresses that compare favorably in every way with higher priced frocks. Hundreds to choose from—all ways in the newest styles and in all sizes from a 14 to a 48.

The smart printed silk dress sketched is typical of our dress values at $10

Dresses that are smartly different and always good values are a specialty in our dress department

Dresses that have a feeling of Spring about them—that are irresistible in smartness, style and value. Unusual prints; delightful pastel shades; dresses rich with lace, even short or cap sleeves and capes are represented. The style sketched is a handsome lace dress at $49.50. Other dresses from $15 to $125.

Many splendid lines of merchandise are sold exclusively in Portland by this store.

The new silhouette brings fur scarfs to the front

Our specialization in furs makes possible a good fur scarf for $25; and values of equal interest in genuine silver foxes at $250. Red fox scarf sketched $39.50.

Blouses give variety to your suits or separate skirts

You can have gay crisp little pastel cottons for $1.99 that launder beautifully—silk blouses with a wealth of detail for $5.99 (one sketched) or silk blouses with short sleeves $3.98.

A pump in suntan beige kid $7.50. A wet pump with arch fitting qualities for Spring. Other new Spring shoes $4.85 to $9.50.

Knitted suits that "tuck-in" smartly —from a sport department that's more evidence of a helpful specialization!

A tuck-in is the last word in a knitted suit—those delightful costumes that need no washing or ironing; that take the place of a coat when the weather gets warmer. Masonic Match

Dr. Stewart is Dutch Pool Champion

Dr. D. M. Stewart of South Paris cued his way into the Dutch pool championship at the Masonic club room on Saturday evening. He made the game limit of one hundred points in twelve innings while his runner-up, Harry Kimball, made seventy. The winner's average was 8.1-3 points.

Mr. Kimball won the first shot by a test of skill at placing the cue ball near the cushion. His opening offering was good for a billiard, but he scratched and lost the point. Dr. Stewart led during the contest in spite of two scratches counting a loss of 22. A large gallery witnessed the sport for it was the climax in a series of preliminaries, and semifinals to eliminate fourteen pairs for the grand final. Both final players in the run for the championship had the credit point out ways in which these difficulties may be overcome and even used to minister to life.

Following is the score by innings:

This tournament arranged by Lewis T. Gilbert, has created much interest among the Masons and went through with a show of keen rivalry and display of real sportsmanship. It was promoted to encourage interest in the club and for entertainment without expense or strings attached.

There has been a call for a similar program in straight pool and Mr. Gilbert is booking players, so pairs may be drawn, perhaps on Saturday evening.

Oxford Lodge justly boasts of a brace of excellent cue artists, whether for Dutch or straight pool. Not one aspires to become a world champion, but are content to play the game for its social contacts and good fellowship.

At present H. H. Hosmer holds the table record. In practice he has made a run of eighty-four points, all name shots.

This came as a great surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Merrill as they didn't expect anything. The Bartlett-Gurney wedding which took place, recently, was in keeping with this affair. Mr. and Mrs. Merrill were married March 24th, 1888, Mrs. Bartlett being their oldest grandchild.

FORGETS HIS CALENDAR
The Biddeford Journal, which is always critical of Maine newspaper editors, comments on Fred Owen's little couplet, written right after Christmas:

The way now dreary is ahead,
And I foresee the way
There'll be no holiday again,
Till December Day.

Thus says the fastidious Journal:
"How do you get that way, Fred, and what's your authority for such paucity of holiday? Among the major holidays between Christmas and Memorial Day are New Year's Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Washington's Birthday and Patriot's Day. Then in December, there is Groundhog Day, St. Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's Day and All Fools Day."

"Of course, not all of these are legal holidays, when the newspapers cease from brooding and their editors get a chance to do a few extra chores around the house, but all of them have the holiday flavor and some of them are decidedly worthwhile."

The Biddeford news man—Shorey, like-wise files exception and talks thusly: "The editor of the Journal, probably because he lives in a great metropolis, accurate in his most things, slips a cog. He disregards entirely the greatest holiday between these dates in nearly 500 of the municipalities of the state of Maine—March Meeting Day—the day when we all celebrate as the greatest event of the year."

"On this day we gather at the various halls in towns and plantations to settle the affairs of state and to lay plans for the ensuing year."

"The dwellers in the cities of the state know little, if anything, of the importance of this day, but back here in the country it is a great day, and we all turn out in a way to take an active part in its observance."

"The town meeting is the purest form of democracy there is and in these days when we are trying to make the country safe for democracy, this day should not be disregarded."

How about printing town reports? Isn't that a holiday picnic for country printing offices? We think so.

If you want to help a bit;
If you want to make a hit;
If you want a blessing on your head
dun!—
If you want to boost the town,
Bring its citizens renown,
Just mention that you saw it in this journal.
It will help the advertiser,
It will show that you are wiser,
More considerate than the average man you meet;
It is just a little favor;
But it leaves a pleasant flavor,
If you mention that you saw it in this sheet.
You'll encourage local trade,
And the home merchant aid,
While the editor will cut a merry caper,
And the mail order concern
Smaller dividends will earn,
If you mention that you saw it in this paper.

PRIVATE AND PUBLIC PHONES

Lord Wolmer, former assistant postmaster general of Great Britain, recently published statistics comparing the telephone system of that nation, owned and operated by the government, with the privately owned system in the United States.

He says that publicly owned systems are inefficient, slow and wasteful, due to political control, and that it requires two men to perform the work that would be done by one man in a private system.

The average cost of installing a telephone in this country is $220. In Great Britain it is $385. Yet American telephone employees receive wages almost double those of British workmen.

In England the cost of telephone service is from $65 to $300 depending on the locality. The cost in this country for the same service is from $45 to $140. In spite of this, British telephone and telegraph systems are losing money that must be replaced from the public treasury, while American telephones pay heavy taxes into the public treasury and a fair return on investments of stockholders.

These are facts, not theories. No matter how much government ownership of utilities may appeal as an abstract principle, the fact and actuality cannot be discounted. Political control is the bitter enemy of industrial efficiency.

Linoleum, to give the best service, should be laid over a smooth floor in such a way that it does not buckle, and it should be cleaned with a damp cloth wrung out of suds made with mild soap. Alkali washing powders, strong soap, or too much water will ruin even the best linoleum.

Tomatoes, fresh, raw, or canned, are a good source of vitamin A, B and C. This is the reason tomato juice is often recommended for young children and even babies. Include tomatoes frequently in the menu in one form or another. Try them raw, stewed, baked, fried, broiled, or scalloped, or in sauces, soups and stews.

The Cure for Forest Devastation

From Report of George P. Ahern and Clifford Pinchot to the Society of American Foresters at Des Moines, Iowa, December 30, 1929

The forests of America are in greater danger today than ever before in their history. Not one acre out of eight of our forest remains, and the percentage of this remaining forest is decreasing faster than ever before. Forest devastation on privately owned timberlands is the most serious of all dangers to our future prosperity. We cannot cut without wood. Forest devastation not only wood, but water too. It ruins our watersheds, and in the Northwest squanders the great original forest wealth of the country. The forest growth is falling steadily farther behind the rate with forest destruction. In the race with forest destruction, the forest is losing ground. Today it is at a disadvantage. Two out of every three acres of forest already consumed more than they produce, and cannot supply the needs of their own people. Because of forest devastation many States are losing their timber and pay freight on lumber from distances of one to three miles.

States import nine-tenths of the lumber they use. Yet our lumbermen are cutting out the country nearly one-half of the lumber they cut. The States which can still furnish lumber for export within seven years. The Northwest will last much longer, but forest fires do not continue to cut vast quantities of standing timber. In 1910, in 1919, and in 1929, as reported by the Forest Service, the number of forest fires was doubled in the last three years. There were 177,000 forest fires in the last three years. The number of forest fires was only one-fifth as much, in 1925. Every twelve months an amount of forest land is destroyed as the State of Connecticut. More than 100,000 acres of forest have been ruined already, and the loss is uncheckable. Outside of the States and State forests and parks, the situation is highly dangerous. It is rapidly worse, and rapidly worse.

National and State forests, containing one-fifth of our forest lands, are the less valuable half of our forest. They are safe from forest fires, but not safe from fire. But forest fires before they were created, they furnish but three per cent of our lumber. If to this three per cent one additional percent is added, the private lands must be protected. Outside of the States, we are forced to the conclusion that 96 per cent of all forest in the United States is cut and sold to insure another forest. It is roughly true that where one saw log is cut, conservatively, four are devastated, or cut without regard to future growth.

Increasing distances over which lumber must be hauled nearer forest have been destroyed have raised the present money cost of forest devastation certainly to hundreds of millions of dollars every year, and probably billions. All of which are consumed. When our own supplies are exhausted there is no region on earth that can supply us, even at excessive prices, with the kinds and amounts of wood upon which our national standard of living is based. The vast quantities of lumber we need in America we must grow or go without. If we go without, every business, every occupation, every industry, for nothing that we use or eat or wear can be produced, manufactured, or transported without the help of wood.

Lumbermen interested in continuing the profits they make from forest devastation must be helped. Outside of the States, we are forced to the conclusion that 96 per cent of all forest in the United States is cut and sold to insure another forest. It is roughly true that where one saw log is cut, conservatively, four are devastated, or cut without regard to future growth.

There is no reason for removing food from a can as soon as it is opened. In fact, transferring the canned product to another receptacle might add to the danger of contamination.

Why Have Butter Prices Gone Down?
Authorities answer that too many people, including cream producers themselves have stopped eating Good Wholesome Butter and are buying substitutes.
Farmers: Do you realize that statistics show that every nickel you save buying Oleo costs you and the butter industry $1.75?

CORRUGATED ROOFING
IS TAKING THE PLACE OF ALL OTHER KINDS OF ROOFING
Corrugated Roofing is laid right over the old shingles at about one-third the cost of putting on other kinds of roofing. The large sheets are nailed on with 2 1/2 inch galvanized nails.

Roofs boarded up and down or open boarding makes no difference when using corrugated roofing.
No staging is necessary in laying corrugated roofing, just use a roof ladder and move across the roof as the sheets are laid.

FIREPROOF
Sparks falling on corrugated roofing can do no damage. Neither can fire burn up through and damage other buildings.
A LIFETIME ROOF
Corrugated Roofing puts an end to all roofing troubles. After a building is once covered with corrugated roofing, there is no necessity to climb up onto the roof again. Our roofing contains copper and is heavily galvanized, top and bottom, which prevents rusting.

ANYONE CAN LAY CORRUGATED ROOFING
A ladder and a hammer are all that is necessary. Anyone who can drive nails can lay corrugated roofing.
Send us the measure of your roof and we will give you the exact cost, landed on your place.

CAR LOAD ON THE WAY
We have bought the largest carload that could be shipped on the railroad. We expect it to arrive in a few days. The price is the same, $6.00 per 100 square feet, delivered any place in this part of the country.

Yours for corrugated roofing,
